Part I

Dear Ms. Chou,

I am the principal of the school that your son goes to. You may not remember me, but we met at the Parent-Teacher Day last year. I'm writing to you today because I have some news about Jay that you may not be happy to hear.

In the past few weeks, several of Jay's teachers have come to me. All of them said that he didn't behave, either in or out of class. He didn't care even after he was given warnings and told to stop. His actions have led to problems in classes, and some of his classmates were hurt by the things he said and did.

The teachers also told me that they've written to you many times about this, but you haven't answered yet.

I think the best way to fix this problem is for you to come and have a talk with me. With your help, we might have a better chance of understanding what's going on with Jay. If I fail to hear from you, stronger actions may be taken to stop him from acting this way.

Sincerely,

Randall Kelly

Part II

A long time ago, on a farm lived an old farmer and his son. The old farmer felt that he didn't have much time to live, and he worried that his son would keep wasting his life after he died. So, he called his son to his room one day. "I hid some treasure on the farm for you many years ago, so you'll be fine when I meet my maker," the old farmer said to his son on his bed, "I can't remember where I hid it, but it must be somewhere in the ground." Then, the old farmer fell asleep and never woke up. His son started to dig on the farm right away. For several weeks, he dug day and night. However, he found nothing. Soon, summer came. Because the ground was well-loosened by the son, the crops grew far better than the neighbors'. When the son saw the crops, he suddenly understood what the treasure was. It was not money or something expensive, but the nice reward that came from his hard work.

(Four people are talking about computers during lunch.)

Brad：Computers are the things I can live without because they never work for me. All I can do is turn them on, and that's it. No matter what I do, something strange always happens. I think life is easier without them.

Flora：They are great machines that I use for putting reports together and making them look good. I also use them to get on the Internet and find information easily and quickly that I need. However, playing games and watching videos are not the things that I like to do on computers.

Eugene：Whether I'm at home or at school, I spend lots of time on computers. I use them for checking my e-mails, watching videos, and everything in between. What's more, getting my homework done without them is something that I can't even imagine.

Justine：Just call me Miss Computer because my life is all about those amazing machines. I have been known to fix my friends' computers when problems that they can't deal with come up.
